SLUSS: Hearing held on Facebook issue in murder trial

Sluss' attorney, Jerry Patton, questioned the juror as to whether she was familiar with Destiny's Law and Destiny's Hope.

The juror testified that she is familiar with it now, but that she had not been prior to or during the trial.

Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney Tony Skeans asked that Patton be clear, explaining that there are two separate sites he is referencing—one a Facebook page and other a Web page.

Patton asked the juror about being questioned during voir dire and to explain what she meant when she said she had seen "a set up" when asked about whether she had seen anything on Facebook about the case or people involved.

"I saw stuff set up on the side of the road," the juror said.

The victim's family set up a display beside the road in the area where the 10-year-old was killed.

The juror explained that she and her husband shared a Facebook page at that time and that she didn't recall visiting Destiny's Law or Destiny's Hope.

"Do you deny that you contacted that site on July 13, 2010?" Patton asked.

"I don't recall," she said. "It's a Facebook that we shared together. I have no recollection of information on there. You can like many different pages without going to the actual site. If it is something your friends like, you might click on the like button too, but you don't have to actually go to the site."

The juror said that since she had sent Brewer the friend request, there had been no further communication between them.

Skeans asked the juror how many Facebook friends she had, and she said 1,000. He then asked whether she knew all her Facebook friends, and she said no.

"Why would you friend someone you don't know?" Skeans asked.

"I have no logical explanation," the juror said.

The juror told Skeans that she may spend approximately 30 minutes a day on Facebook, that she didn't play games on the site and that she primarily used it for sharing pictures, to find out if there is school and for community-type stuff.

The juror also said that she and her husband now have separate Facebook accounts. She also said that anyone with the log-on information and password could go onto her account.

"The day I walked in to be selected as a juror, I didn't know Brandon Sluss or April Brewer, nor any of their family," the juror said.

The juror's husband, although not subpoenaed, was put on the witness stand.

He was not aware that he was going to be asked to testify and was kept separate of his wife during her testimony.

The husband testified that he and his wife previously shared a Facebook page, and he didn't remember contacting April Brewer.

"I don't even know her," the husband said.

The second female juror testified that she doesn't know April Brewer and that she didn't think she had a Facebook account, but that she does and that she found out about it when she spoke with Skeans "this morning."

The juror explained that she has children and grandchildren who use her computer and that they must have set up an account with her name on it.

Patton asked her to explain why they would use her name on the account.

The juror explained that they probably used her name because they get on there and purchase games with her credit card.

The juror said that she got on the Internet and typed in the search engine to try and find out how to "can peppers," but that she didn't know if it was Facebook or not.

The juror denied ever having asked to be friends with Brewer and said she didn't know whether she is a Facebook friend of hers or not.

"Listen, I hardly ever do anything. I read," the juror said. "Check the library how many books I've checked out. I'm not a computer person."

The juror said she would provide them with her account information and that they could get on there and check anything they wanted to.

"My husband can't read, and so I go on there and find him games, like Iwin. It's on the side of the page," the juror said. "I didn't know I actually had a Facebook account until Skeans told me. I'm not a computer person, I'm a book person. I've had that computer for about seven years. I bought it because my children needed a computer for school and it was more than likely that it was one of my daughters. If somebody sends me pictures on there, I have to get one of my daughters to come and help me so I can look at the pictures."

Judge Preston said he had received the requested communications from Facebook Monday at 9:57 p.m. and that he had not had a chance to review them prior to Tuesday's hearing.

Preston said he would issue an order to make it part of the record and that he would forward it to Skeans and Patton, after which they could determine whether further action was needed through a telephone conference.

The first juror was told that she may be needed for additional testimony and was asked by Preston to write down a phone number through which she could be contacted should it be necessary.

The Supreme Court issued an opinion Sept. 20 ordering that a hearing be scheduled in Martin Circuit Court within 60 days to determine whether the two jurors answered questions truthfully during voir dire. Sluss had filed an appeal of his conviction in which he raised 16 issues.

The court concluded that the trial court erred in not giving full consideration to Sluss' claim of juror misconduct, "which is founded on a question of first impression alleging that jurors may have lied during voir dire and juror bias through the use of social media websites, namely Facebook."

"The case is therefore remanded to Martin Circuit Court to hold a hearing on whether the jurors answered voir dire questions truthfully, and, if not, the extent of exposure the jurors had to the Facebook account of the victim's mother, and whether that exposure, if any, tainted the jurors to such extent that it was a miscarriage of justice to allow them to participate as jurors in Sluss's trial," the opinion said.

to Feb. 16, 2011, when Albert's office was raided.

The indictment also included a forfeiture allegation that Albert "used and intended to use" $539,682.95 to "commit and to facilitate the commission of the said controlled substance violations." The money "constitutes proceeds obtained directly and indirectly as a result of the commission" of the violations, the indictment said.

Albert pleaded guilty in December 2011 as part of a plea agreement and has since surrendered his medical license. His initial sentencing was set for April but was continued indefinitely pending a mental examination.

Albert apologized for his actions in a letter to the judge in June in which he asked for leniency. Albert said in the letter that greed "got the best of me."

INEZ —The Inez City Commission held its first meeting at the new scheduled regular time of 9 a.m. Thursday with Tim Preece acting in his capacity as mayor pro tem.

Mayor Terry Fraley and Commissioner Chris Maynard were out of town and did not attend the meeting.

During the meeting, Martin County School District representative Paul Baker talked to the commission about the safe-routes-to-school project he has been working on that would provide children at Inez Middle School with a safe path on which they could walk to school.

Baker explained that the school district is seeking grant money to fund the project and that it would work in conjunction with another proposed project to provide a bicycle trail/walking trail also currently underway and which would intersect with each other.

Baker also brought a map to show the commission the proposed area that would be used for the school project, explaining that a boulder was blocking a section of the proposed area and that it is crucial it be moved in order to obtain the grant.

Baker said the county is planning to move the boulder and pave the area.

City Clerk Candy Crum said she had spoken with employees at the county garage to find out about the property and discovered that it has a county road number, 1094.

"The county is going to come in and make it a six-foot walking path, which would allow bicycle and foot traffic and no motorized vehicles," Baker said.

"I think the boulder was put there because they were worried that four-wheelers were going to come through there and there was an issue with horses," Preece said. "It wouldn't be so bad if the owners were cleaning up after them, but they aren't, and the people walking up the trail run into that, so it is a problem."

Crum said she will draft a resolution showing the city's support of the project for the next regular meeting in December, and in it she would be sure to include the fact that the road is in fact owned by the county and has a county road number.

Crum also asked Baker to consider handicap parking in the plans, around the area of the ball fields, and as an example said her husband is disabled and unable to walk a great distance but isn't confined to a wheelchair.

"I don't know that he will ever attend a game, but you have to consider there are other grandparents who might want to attend but just can't walk that far," Crum said. "Is that something you could consider?"

Baker said he has been working with the Big Sandy Area Development District and that he would inquire whether he could include that in his grant request.

Big Sandy ADD representative Denise Thomas was present at the meeting and explained to Baker that he would be able to include the request.

"I think this is a great project, and I think we have a very good chance of being successful on obtaining the grant since it's been such a long time since Eastern Kentucky has been a recipient," Baker said. "We have a high need in this area and with our rates of obesity, it's important."

In other business, Preece presented the commission with a report showing the work that has been done in the street department.

Crum said in her report to the commission that newly elected commissioners must be sworn in prior to January and that they also need to set a date for the city's Christmas dinner.

Crum mentioned that there are two separate opportunities for the commissioners to obtain training, one being at the Ramada in Paintsville, which is free and sponsored by the Kentucky League of Cities, and another that is out of town and will be held on Jan. 16-18 and costs $129 per person, aside from the cost of the room.

Crum asked the commission whether Dec. 14 would be acceptable as the date for the Christmas dinner, and Preece and Commissioner Floyd Jude agreed that it would be fine.

"I have a ballgame nearly every day in December and January, so I will have to check my calendar," Commissioner Ronnie Hickman said. "I'm booked solid, so I will just have to check my calendar."

Earthquake felt in local counties

BSN Staff Report

An earthquake centered in Kentucky was felt Saturday by residents in Lawrence, Johnson, Floyd, Martin and other counties in Eastern Kentucky, although no major damage was reported.

The epicenter of the 4.3 magnitude earthquake was about 10 miles west of Whitesburg in Letcher County near the Virginia line, according to the U.S. Geological Survey USGS. Residents in Kentucky and Virginia, as well as in West Virginia, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Indiana, Ohio and Georgia reportedly felt the quake, which lasted about 15 seconds.

The quake was considered "light," according to the USGS.

In August 2011, a 5.8 magnitude earthquake that hit Virginia was felt in several Eastern Kentucky counties, with several residences and businesses experiencing damage.

According to information posted by the U.S. Geological Survey, the 5.8 magnitude quake was from a depth of approximately 3.7 miles, occurring approximately five miles from Mineral, Va., but was felt all along the east coast, as far away as Washington D.C., New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, North Carolina, Georgia, West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky.

males armed with a 2X4 piece of lumber made entry into the residence by forcing open the back door, the release said.

The men allegedly entered the residence, assaulted the resident and her boyfriend, and took several items before leaving the area on foot, the release said.

The men are described as wearing hooded shirts with their faces covered.

Both occupants of the residence were transported to medical facilities for minor injuries suffered during the assault, the release said.

The incident remains under investigation by KSP Trooper John Dixon.

Letters to the editor

Thanks for supporting walk ...

Editor:

I would like thank all who supported us with our first ever Team Hope Walk for Huntingtons Disease.

Our goal was to raise money and awareness. When the organizing started for the walk, I never dreamed that so many families in our area are affected by this horrible disease, nor did I dream of having so many out to support it, being able to meet so many wonderful people, becoming friends with so many, and finding that our families are NOT alone in our journey. I am proud to say that we were able to extend our walk to not only Lawrence County, but to our adjoining counties of Boyd, Carter, Elliot, Johnson, Martin, Floyd, Pike, Fayette, and Shelby counties, and even in Columbus, Ohio, with donations arriving from Franklin County, and as far away as Montclair, New Jersey, as well as people from all over the USA who were in prayer for our walk.

I am so very thankful for those who came out to the park on October 20, to join us in our walk, whether it be walking for their families, friends, neighbors or just coming out to let us know they care. I would like to thank Erica Jewell, Lisa Halcomb, Brittany Halcomb, and Elaine Mabry for gathering donations and for all the leg work you did along with the work at the park; Betty Bartlett, and Alison Chandler, for working the registration table; Kenny Adams for bringing sound and running sound at the park for our singers. Turn extra time into extra cash with your smartphone
by Kim Komando

Kim Komando hosts the nation's largest talk radio show about consumer electronics, computers and the Internet.

Many people indulge in too many sweets during the holidays, which is bad for the waistline. And some people put too many gifts on their credit cards, which is bad for the bottom line.

I can't help you resist the sweets, but I can help you make extra money. Thanks to the Internet and smartphones, there are some interesting new ways to earn extra spending money for holiday gifts.

Tens of thousands of people pick up pocket money every day by performing quick field work tasks for companies.

Many businesses - big and small - post micro-projects through a free iPhone app called Gigwalk (an Android version is in the works).

A national retailer or restaurant chain, for example, might need someone in your town to mystery shop or dine at a local outlet and evaluate the experience. An automaker may need to know what a new parking garage in your town charges so the data can be added to in-car navigation systems.

It's important for companies to get these micro-jobs done, but it makes no financial sense to assign them to full- or part-time employees.

Many Gigwalk jobs involve photographing businesses or product displays in stores. It's how Microsoft is gathering the thousands of panoramic photos it needs for its Bing search engine.

You don't necessarily need to invest in expensive camera gear - the iPhone's camera is good enough for most vendors. A few jobs might require DSLR-quality photos.

Once registered with Gigwalk, you're notified of tasks that come up in your city. You compete with other Gigwalkers and "apply" for gigs with a 140-character message.

As a newbie, you'll make $10 or less for many tasks. But as your reputation and positive feedback snowballs, you're shown increasingly lucrative jobs of $50 or more. The money can really add up if you tackle several tasks a day.

Some companies invite experienced and reliable Gigwalkers to private teams, which is sort of like becoming a regular freelancer.

TaskRabbit is another popular micro-job platform. Currently serving a dozen major cities in the U.S., TaskRabbit started out as a safe way for homeowners to get help with odd jobs like house cleaning, pet sitting and assembling Ikea furniture.

TaskRabbits must pass a screening process that includes a video interview and a thorough background check. Many TaskRabbits are college students, retirees and moms.

A lot of businesses owners have discovered that TaskRabbit is also a great way to find on-demand virtual assistants, event staff and delivery drivers. Bakery shops and other boutique retailers often need extra help to handle holiday orders. But they don't have the time or resources to find qualified temporary workers.

Are you the kind of person whose friends always ask you about fashion and shopping advice?

Turn your sense of style into spending money by using social media to drive traffic to online retailers.

For years, bloggers have been receiving rewards from marketers for favorably mentioning new products to readers. The model is being extended to posters on Pinterest, Facebook, Twitter and other social networks.

Fallsburg Elementary raises money through McTeacher's Night fundraiser

LOUISA — Fallsburg Elementary recently teamed up with a McDonald's restaurant to raise money for its school through a McTeacher's Night fundraiser.

A team of teachers and staff from the school worked at the Louisa McDonald's, owned by Tom and Bob Hutchison, during a weeknight dinner shift, staffing different positions, including front counter cashier and drive-thru order presenter. McDonald's employees assisted the teachers with their new jobs.

A portion of sales from the teachers' shift was donated to Fallsburg Elementary. Thanks to the support of parents, students and community members, the school raised $679.17.

Jennifer Cantrell, marketing coordinator for McDonald's of East Kentucky, presented principal Jamie Lester and teacher Wrendi Prince with a donation check Oct. 29.

McDonald's restaurants in the tri-state area host McTeacher's Nights throughout the year as fundraisers for local schools. As a result, restaurants in Central and Southern West Virginia, Eastern Kentucky and Southeastern Ohio donated almost $30,000 to education during the 2011-12 school year.

For more information on this fundraiser, visit your local McDonald's and ask to speak to a manager about McTeacher's Night.

JENNIFER CANTRELL, marketing coordinator for McDonald's of East Kentucky, presented principal Fallsburg Elementary principal Jamie Lester and teacher Wrendi Prince with a donation check Oct. 29. The check represented a portion of proceeds from a recent McTeacher's Night fundraiser.

CASH: (Continued from A7)

Shopping site Beso recently threw open the doors of its Affiliate Program to all account holders. As an Affiliate, every time friends and followers click on products you share, you make money.

Pay ranges from 5 to 90 cents per click, with 14 cents being the average in categories such as clothing and shoes.

Other popular social shopping sites, such as the Fancy and Pose, have introduced similar programs.

To stay on the ethical side - and follow FTC and social network guidelines - users should disclose that they're getting paid for a referral-based link. That can be as simple as adding #ad, #paid or #spon to a post.

Finally, it's important to be wary of fake online classified ads and work-at-home job scams, especially this time of year. Remember that legitimate operations won't ask you for money up-front or promise extravagant paychecks.

PAINTSVILLE — Covington Catholic made numerous big plays and took advantage of several Johnson Central miscues to defeat the Golden Eagles 45-15 Friday night in the second round of the Class 4A state playoffs at Golden Eagle Field.

Following the loss, Johnson Central finished the season 9-3.

EKBA FALL CLASSIC CHAMPIONS 2012

Shooting Stars win in first outing

PAINTSVILLE — Shooting Stars, a 4th grade travel basketball team from Johnson County, opened their 2012-2013 season on Saturday, Nov. 3 as they traveled to the Knott County Sportsplex.

In the first round of action, Shooting Stars faced R.W. Combs and took control early. The score at halftime was Stars 23, R.W.Combs 6. The final score of the contest was 48-18.

Jared Wellman led the balanced scoring attack with 11 points while Ryleh Mckenzie also placed in double figures with 10. Rounding out the scoring was center Joe Schmidt with seven points followed by Nash Salisbury and Kamen Slone, who each netted six.

The semifinals featured Shooting Stars against Shelby Valley. Once again, the game was decided early as the Shooting Stars attack was simply too strong. The Stars took a commanding 31-3 lead into the half and finished the game on top by a final score of 41-11.

Three players reached double figures in scoring — Jared Wellman 12, Ryleh Mckenzie 10, and Grant Rice 10.

Following a short break, Shooting Stars battled the Hazard Bulldogs for the championship. The Stars were determined to take home their first title and to do so would have to handle Hazard's full-court press. With little rest between games, fatigue would not be an issue as the Stars dismantled Hazard's press and claimed the lead early. The final score of the contest was 41-19.

Pacing the team in scoring for the third straight time would be Jared Wellman with a game-high of 17 points. Also turning in another strong performance was Joe Schmidt with nine points.

25th annual Big Blue Crush blood drive set for this week

PIKEVILLE — For 25 years, Kentuckians have been bleeding blue and saving lives during Big Blue Crush. This year, the annual blood battle between Kentucky and Tennessee football fans is Nov. 12-16, and fans are urged to donate and continue the winning tradition.

"It's not about a game. It's about life," said William Reed, president and CEO of Kentucky Blood Center (KBC). "Blood collected during Crush in both Kentucky and Tennessee will ensure we have enough blood on our shelves during the holidays for all the hospitals and patients that both of our blood centers serve.

"We know Kentucky donors love their Wildcats, and this is a great opportunity for them to prove it — and beating Tennessee in the blood battle is always a nice bonus," said Reed.

Donors will receive a short-sleeve, black, commemorative Big Blue Crush T-shirt, a coupon for a free McDonald's McCafe' beverage, a Bleed Blue wristband and a chance to win daily prizes.

KBC has donor centers in Lexington, Pikeville and Somerset, and the city leaders in all three communities have proclaimed Nov. 12-16 as Big Blue Crush Week.

Kentucky Blood Center

(KBC) donors have claimed the Crush trophy the past two years, but Tennessee leads the competition 12 to 11 with 1 tie. Last year more than 3,200 Kentucky donors gave blood. This year, KBC officials hope to see 3,500.

To schedule a donation or to find a donation location, visit kybloodcenter.org or call 800.775.2522.

Blood donors must have a photo I.D., be 17 years old (16 with parental consent), weigh at least 110 pounds, be in general good health and meet additional requirements. Sixteen-year-old donors must have a signed parental permission slip, which can be found at kybloodcenter.org.
